HIT SUMMITS - ELEVATING THE OUTCOME®

Buying and Accelerating HIT Success

The ostensible benefit of your technology purchase is tightly tied to your strategy, people, process and organizational transformation. However, the item that your Healthcare Information Technology (HIT) peers, the C-suite and boardroom will fixate on is the price paid for the technology components. Key to a successful solution's roadmap is the careful approach to choosing a vendor that will satisfy the specific requirements of an organization, including existing and future architecture, storage, networking, hardware specifications, user interfaces, and workflow... Radiation Dose Safety: Medical Imaging Essentials: A good radiation safety program is multifaceted. Regardless of the implementation of automated radiation dose management systems and devices, a healthcare provider's radiation safety program must include well established and continuous CT imaging protocol management for adult and pediatric patients, ongoing training/education for all staff members, incident risk management planning, advanced workflows including order decision support, imaging policies and procedure, patient education and communication, and methods in messaging and marketing the program to the community, perhaps even the industry....To read the full article as featured in AHRA's LINK Magazine - click here
